

What mission leaders are saying about Tokyo 2010:

"I like the fact Tokyo 2010 is inviting participants as representatives of mission boards, associations, and agencies. I love the idea we will be able to give to every leader the latest people group information."

*Dr. Paul Eshleman
Director, Finishing the Task Movement*

"What will Tokyo be like? No one will be invited! All participants will be selected and delegated by mission associations and mission agencies. . . Why is a global level meeting of mission leaders important? Because like an avalanche, the peoples of the world are now more and more global in their location. That is the reason for the new Global Network of Mission Structures."

*Dr. Ralph Winter
Founder, Frontier Mission Fellowship*

"I am excited about the Tokyo 2010 gathering and I hope that many other mission leaders see the unique value of it. . . Of the various global forums slated for 2010, there will be none better that affords global mission leadership interaction."

*Dr. Marv Newell
Director, CrossGlobal Link*

"We anticipate that Tokyo 2010 will be an important opportunity for mission organizations from around the world to learn from one another. . . . As of yet there is still no global network of mission organizations networking together to fully engage all the peoples of the world in a systematic way. . . . We need more cooperation in research and joint planning to address this, and our hope is that Tokyo 2010 will get us moving in that direction."

*Dr. Yong Cho
Gen. Secretary,
World Korean Missionary Fellowship*

TOKYO 2010
GLOBAL MISSION
CONSULTATION AND CELEBRATION:
A gathering of global mission leaders
May 11-14, 2010

Making Disciples
of Every People
in Our Generation

Consultation Facts

Venue and Dates: Tokyo, Japan, May 11-14, 2010

Delegates: Leaders and representatives of all the world's mission structures

Theme: Making disciples of every people in our generation

Background: Called for by missiologist Dr. Ralph Winter, organizer of Edinburgh 1910, as a follow up consultation that would assess the progress made over the last one hundred years, examine what remains to be done, make joint plans towards finishing the task, and facilitate the structures needed to ensure the global implementation of these plans.

Purpose: To Celebrate what God has done over the last 100 years since Edinburgh 1910, to cast vision for the future (assessing what remains to be done), to introduce new models in frontier missions (for reaching the least reached peoples), and to facilitate coordination among mission organizations to fully engage and disciple every people with the gospel of the Kingdom.

Selected Sponsors: CrossGlobal Link (formerly IFMA), Third World Missions Association, U.S. Center for World Mission, Global Network of Mission Structures, Asian Missions Association, Indian Missions Association, Global Network of Centers for World Mission, International Society for Frontier Missiology.

Distinctives

- Organized in the pattern of Edinburgh 1910 and 1980: Mission agencies, not individuals are invited. Delegates must be commissioned by their organization to represent them at the consultation.

- Focus on the least-reached peoples, especially the "unengaged" (today's term for the "unoccupied fields" of Edinburgh 1910, but with a people-group perspective).

- Exploring/evaluating new avenues of frontier mission sending and field strategy.
- Emphasis on majority world missions (strengthening the missions movement in the non-Western world). Two-thirds of all delegates will be from non-Western mission agencies (in 1980 only one-third were non-Western, and in 1910, less than 1%).
- Special attention given to the "disciple-making" dimension of the Great Commission. Integration of this emphasis into every aspect of the consultation.
- Initiating a global research project, both before, during and following the consultation to assess the progress of discipleship in every people of the world.
- Organized with the intention of facilitating inter-mission coordination and follow-up to plans made to fully engage all the peoples of the world with disciple-making teams.

How can I apply to attend Tokyo 2010?

It is the responsibility of sending mission agencies and churches to choose and send their delegates to Tokyo 2010, in the pattern of Edinburgh 1910. No other qualifying or screening will be done by the acceptance committee. In general, we will be looking at general quota guidelines per agency, with two delegates per sending agency with 25 or less missionaries serving cross-culturally, and three delegates for sending agencies with over 25 and under 50 missionaries, and four delegates for larger agencies. Applications for participation as delegates for individuals and situations outside of these guidelines will be considered, but approval cannot be guaranteed. In addition, pastors and leaders from Japan can apply as Observers.

What are the costs?

The registration fee is $150 for applicants from all countries except the following; Australia, Canada, Europe (Western), Japan, Korea, New Zealand, Singapore, and the United States). The registration fee for applicants from these countries is $300, with the extra $150 used to provide partial scholarships for needy and worthy applicants. Applicants from these countries are also expected to pay for their own lodging costs (options will be provided by the Japan Host Committee), although the basic 7-meal package (four evening meals and three lunches) is included for all participants. Otherwise the package is the same for delegates from all countries. For all others, the registration fee covers administrative and program costs of the conference, housing in Japanese host homes for up to five nights (Monday through Friday nights), meals for the same period, and airport arrival and departure transportation on standard arrival (May 10 or 11) and departure (May 15) days.
