

Last Mile Calling (LMC) is a global ministry committed to enable global collaboration among the missions community with the objective of fulfilling the Great Commission. LMC is a resource web site. LMC is a resource web application. LMC is about building bridges among the missions community. LMC is not a mission organization, but works for and on behalf of global mission's community, whether they are mission agencies, churches, individuals...anyone and everyone who is committed to the Great Commission.

LMC is launching an on-line networking platform. It is to enable closer cooperation and collaboration. The fully secure, on-line networking platform would enable members of the global missions community stay connected, irrespective of where they are located. They can share ideas, exchange information, update one another, adopt unreached people groups, and pray for specific needs of various communities within the network. Each member decides who they want to connect, what information they want to share and to whom they want to share. A single on-line platform, where the global missions community can continue to collaborate together towards fulfilling the Great Commission.

Mission Organizations can use this platform to communicate and collaborate within the organization and/or between organizations.

Members of the Tokyo2010 consultation can be part of this collaboration platform, where workshops and seminars would continue to be discussed and plans implemented via this platform, going beyond the Tokyo 2010 conference.

If you and/or your organization would like to be part of this global mission's collaboration platform, please respond by email to register@lastmilecalling.org indicating your desire to join the network.
